Griffith's Night Play Plan Called 'Happy Dust'

MacPhail Fears it Would Be as Tragic as Porgy's Charm

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.-Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, disclosed today he had written President Clark Griffith of the Washington club. comparing unlimited night baseball to the "happy dust" which a character in the musical play "Porgy and Bess" dispenses with tragic results. MacPhail introduced night baseball to the major leagues while general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, but ever since has maintained that no more than seven night games a season should be played at home by any one club. Griffith, who originally was one of the principal opponents of night baseball, now wants to play every night in the summer except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. MacPhail's letter follows:

'Dear Griff: "I have read with interest your letter on the subject of unlimited night baseball.

"I agree that baseball should co-operate, as suggested by the President, in making occasional night games available for defense workers. Does that mean un-limited night baseball? "There is a character in 'Porgy and Bess' named Sporting Life who provides "happy dust" to soften their problems and ease their troubles—with tragic results. "If baseball sniffs too much of that "happy dust" you are putting out in the form of unlimited night baseball, I am afraid the hangover will be something ter-

Potomac State Trips Columbus Cagers In 45-36 Game

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 31 .- Potomac State School's Catamounts snapped a 3-game losing run and avenged an earlier setback here tonight by defeating Columbus University of Washington, D. C., 45-36, in a basket ball battle featured by the work of Center Dave Hardman who collected 17 points for the winners.

Potomac started a reserve combination and this outfit turned a 6-point lead over to regulars at the end of the first quarter. The varsity pulled away to a 25-11 half-time score, but in the third period Columbus collected 12 tallies while yielding only 7 against a Catamount mixture of first and second stringers.

The rivals battled on even terms in the last period, each getting 13 markers. Veana and Burns sparked the Columbus quint with 11 and 8 points, respectively.
